

Snacks are different, too.

But everyone loves sweet snacks. There are so many kinds around the world

Jelly beans
America

Nyonya kueh
Singapore

A sweet cake made using rice flour and coconut milk. "Nyonya" means "Mother".

Annin
(almond) tofu
China

Halo-halo Philippines
Nata de coco (coconut gel) and fruit on top of shaved ice. "Halo-halo" means "mix-mix."

Fried bananas
Thailand

Jalebi India

Jalebi is a very sweet Indian dessert. After the flour batter is deep-fried, it is covered in syrup.

Jam stars
Croatia

Mandazi East Africa

Mandazi is deep-fried bread in triangle shapes.

Apple pie America

A sweet bun cake for celebration days.

Shoutao (Longevity)
Peach buns
China

Macaron France

Galette des Rois

France

It's lucky to find the doll baked inside this cake. You also get to wear the crown!

Gugelhupf Austria

This cake was a favorite of Marie Antoinette. It is a Christmas staple in Austria.

Baumkuchen Germany

"Baum" means "tree" in German. This cake has rings just like a tree stump.

Doughnuts America

Dango
(Japanese dumplings) Japan

Chocolate Europe

Chocolate is made from cacao, which has a bitter taste if you eat it as it is. Sweetened chocolate was first made in Europe.

Fish stall

Chile

Tulip stand Turkey

There are many kinds of markets in the world.

Pineapple seller Bangladesh

Halloween pumpkin patch America

Many rounds of cheese lined up Holland

This person carries a lot of bananas on a bicycle. How can he carry so many?

Banana-seller East Africa

Needle-sewn lace stand Bulgaria

Tomato and orange stand Italy

A cactus stall Spain

If you take the needles and skin off a cactus, you can eat the inside part in salads and tacos.

A bakery selling pretzels

Germany

Some people sell camels, some carry fruit on their heads, some choose serving dishes for their families.

The market is bustling with many people.

Camels, camels everywhere in this camel market!

Egypt

Papua New Guinea
A woman selling birds

Gourd-seller West Africa

Gourds come in many different shapes. They can be used to keep things in or used as a spoon. They can even turn into a musical instrument.

Thailand
Floating markets

People travel around in different ways depending on where they live.

Some people live on water, and some people live up in the mountains. There are towns and cities where there are many people living there. Where shall we go today?

London's double-decker bus
Britain (United Kingdom)

Reindeer sledding on an icy snow trail.

Norway

Remorques Cambodia

Camels
Sahara
Desert

Elephant taxi
India

Going to a neighboring town by propeller plane. Australia

The Pilatus Railway is the world's steepest mountain railway. Switzerland

A boat made from strong reeds on Lake Titicaca Peru & Bolivia

Cable cars running through the hilly streets of San Francisco. America

Tuk-tuk (three-wheeled taxi) Thailand

Rikshaw (exported from Japan, where they are called "jinrikisha")

Southeast Asia India

Venetian Gondola Italy

Cargo bicycles for carrying children Holland

In Holland, the bicycle lanes have stoplights, too.